

HUERTA DELEGATES READY TO DISCUSS PEACE WITH REBELS

Dictators' representatives make first overture through mediators.

CARRANZA TAKES TIME

Constitutionalist general is expected to comply after his usual delay—British stay in Mexico City.

Niagara Falls, Ontario, July 2.—Communication between the two warring factions in Mexico which it is expected eventually will lead to a conference for the establishment of peace, was begun today when the delegates representing General Huerta formally addressed to the three South American mediators a note to be transmitted to the constitutionalist representative at Washington. In this note the Huerta delegates expressed willingness to discuss means of peace with the constitutionalists and bring to an end the civil strife which has been devastating their country for the last year.

The Huerta note explained in effect their readiness to begin informal conferences for the selection of a provisional president and the solution of the outstanding problems of an internal character.

To hold Vera Cruz. The disposition of the American forces now at Vera Cruz has been left for consideration until such time as the two factions agree on the new provisional government. The American troops already signed cover many phases of the international situation, it is generally recognized that until a provisional government is actually agreed upon, and a day set for the recognition of the new government, American troops will not be withdrawn and international questions not finally settled.

The mediation colony is disposed to regard the protocols thus signed as a basis for agreement. It is being taken for granted that General Carranza ultimately will send delegates but no one ventures to predict when.

Wait Carranza's decision. Washington, July 2.—Constitutionalist representatives in Washington sought today to get into communication with their chief, Carranza, to learn the result of the referendum among his general officers. The referendum was for a vote on the proposed delegates. With Huerta's delegates. The mediation proceedings at Niagara Falls suspended, after practical settlement of the international conference, chief interest in the Mexican situation was centered on the attitude that Carranza and his military leaders would take toward meeting the federal envoys. It was suggested that while Carranza had promised an early development of his stand, it might be delayed by efforts to iron out the differences that have arisen.

Carranza was in Saltillo preparing to remove his provisional capital to Monterrey.

General Villa's agents. General Villa telegraphed from Torreón today to one of his agents here that General Antonio, Villa Real and Francisco Santar, members of the commission appointed to mediate difficulties between himself and General Carranza had arrived at his headquarters and began conferences. Villa added that the outlook was satisfactory.

British slow to leave. Mexico City, July 2.—In spite of the insistent advice of Sir Lionel Carden, the British minister, only thirty-six British subjects, mostly women and children, left for Vera Cruz today. They are on their way to Jamaica. Several who had decided to leave were deterred from so doing at the last moment by the high rate of foreign exchange. The Mexican pesos today being worth only twenty-seven cents of American money.

The British minister was today the target of much bitter criticism by his compatriots here on account of the change in his attitude recently displayed. When he was asked to state the real reason for having advised British subjects to leave the capital, he said there was no special cause except the general feeling of uneasiness in the political situation and the possibility of an acute crisis occurring at any moment.

German leave capital. Vera Cruz, July 2.—Sharing the apprehension sought by the foreigners arrived at Vera Cruz today from the capital, they said the German minister, Von Hintze, on Tuesday advised his countrymen to leave the capital and to store them in a concentrated house chosen far from the center of the city.

In the same house a number of German women were provided with rifles and machine guns, and in case of necessity they will join the Germans in defense.

ONE BANDIT KILLED IN TRAIN HOLD-UP

Pendleton, Ore. July 2.—One robber was killed and one robber and deputy sheriff wounded in a gun battle between three bandits and a passenger on the west bound Oregon-Washington Railroad & Navigation company passenger train No. 5 early today.

The holdup was attempted two miles west of Meacham, fifty miles east of Pendleton.

The wounded robber and his companion escaped to the wild mountainous country near the attempted hold-up.

NEW ANGLE IN THE LA SALLE BANK CASE

Chicago, July 2.—Investigation of the defunct La Salle Street Trust & Savings Bank when it was a national institution, took a new angle today. Government officials turned their attention to the fact that deposits of the bank were used to buy shares of its stock, when these shares on the dropping of the Lorimer case in the senate were thrown on the market.

AYLWARD WILL STAY IN RACE FOR TOGA

Candidate has no intention of switching to Oppose Karel for Governorship, It is Said.

Madison, Wis., July 2.—Close friends of John A. Aylward here today declared there was no possibility of switching Mr. Aylward from his candidacy for United States senator on the democratic ticket to run for governor of Wisconsin. In this connection, Mr. Aylward has been circulating in many sections of the state inviting Mr. Aylward to run for governor. As Aylward has twice been the candidate for governor, his friends here believe that he should try for the higher honor. Again there are those who declare that if a democratic governor can be elected, the state would be true of the United States senatorship, and that these considerations will prompt Mr. Aylward to issue a definite statement on the subject within a few days. Aylward was out of the city today and could not be reached for an interview.

Some of the democratic workers claim to have received letters from former mayor David S. Rose of Milwaukee that he will be placed in charge of the organization of the democratic Karel clubs in the state. Few democratic candidates for state office have as yet made their announcements. There is a rumor that John F. Doherty of La Crosse and Charles E. Boring of Waukegan are the candidates for attorney general.

One of the latest democratic developments is the boom that has been started for John B. Heim, former mayor of Madison, as a candidate for state treasurer on the democratic ticket.

His candidacy has been urged by a Sreboyan paper, and it is said that he is receiving endorsements in many sections of the state. Heim is a well known democrat, and for many years before he was elected mayor served as water commissioner in this city and had practical charge of the municipal plant. He has a large acquaintance throughout the state.

The name of Assemblyman Chris Pickert of Fond du Lac county has been mentioned here as a possibility for secretary of state on the democratic ticket. Pickert has served in three sessions of the legislature. The name of Pickert for the position is the only man so far mentioned as a possible candidate for lieutenant governor.

SENATORS ON STAND IN LETTERHEAD CASE

Overman and Chilton Tell of Their Connections With Mining Concern.

Washington, July 2.—Senators Overman and Chilton were principal witnesses today before a committee investigating charges of misuse of office letterheads for the promotion of a North Carolina senatorial proposition. Senator Overman testified he bought $2,000 worth of stock in the mine, when a treasurer told him the proposition was worth six million. Chilton testified he owned $2,500 worth.

Senator Overman testified that his stenographer had written for a promoter, letters highly commendatory of the project which he considered upon letterheads of the rules committee. The stenographer corroborated that; and a messenger told of bringing some of the letter to the promoter. The stenographer testified he was employed as an attorney.

Senator Chilton said he knew nothing of the use of the census committee letterheads until later when he learned the promoter had been using it. Both senators testified it is customary for constituents to use stationery in their office.

WILL TRY FOR PEACE IN HAITI REPUBLIC

United States Do Not Want to Intervene—May Manage Finances of Southern Country.

Washington, July 2.—There is no thought in the minds of administration leaders of actively intervening in Haiti, but the United States will continue to try to use its influence to bring out peace and the settlement of the financial difficulties of that country.

President Wilson told callers today, and added that the suggestion had been made to him that the United States manage the finances of Haiti the same way it is now managing the finances of the Dominican republic, but that nothing definite in that direction had been done.

Mr. Wilson declared that the situation in Haiti was very complicated.

OPEN FIGHT ON RATS TO CHECK DISEASE

New Orleans Plans Extinction of Vermin to Prevent Spread of Plague.

New Orleans, July 2.—Six thousand baited rat traps today laid silent duty in the infected zone of this city, where they had been placed by direction of the health authorities in their vigorous campaign to eradicate bubonic plague. Two hundred employees of the city placed the traps. Rat-proof residences and business houses and kept their general surveillance in their prescribed area.

The discovery of a second focus of infection developed in the correct one, enlarged the territory over which strict watch is being kept. W. W. Wilkinson today told President Dowling of the state board of health that he had been bitten by a rat prior to developing bubonic plague, while lodging at the volunteer industrial home on St. Joseph street, which was today given a special attention by the health department.

Prior to the arrival here today of Dr. Rupert Blue, sergeant general of the United States public health service, no other measures for stamping out the plague had been adopted.

Dr. Rupert Blue, sergeant general of the United States public health and marine hospital service, arrived in New Orleans today to investigate bubonic plague conditions.

The sergeant general inspected the affected territory in which is located the home of the Volunteers of America, where the only two cases thus far to develop were found last week.

General Blue refused to say what system of procedure would be used in the New Orleans case.

NAVY PROHIBITION LAW IS EFFECTIVE

Secretary Daniels' "Dry" Order Effective at Midnight Tonight—Grape Juice From Now On.

Washington, July 2.—Afloat and ashore, today sees the last of the Secretary of the United States Navy, Secretary Daniels' famous prohibition order goes into effect at midnight tonight, after which any officer found in possession of alcoholic liquor on board ship or at any naval station, is liable for court-martial.

There is only one exemption, made in the case of the ship's surgeon who may keep a limited supply of spirits on hand for medical use only. But Admiral or Captain is as guilty as the seaman if he keeps a stock of wines or liquors for his own consumption or the refreshment of his guests.

The naval hostess, too, after tonight must give up the punch-bowl as a magnet for her guests if the scene of the entertainment be within the naval jurisdiction, as at the Naval Academy, the naval station and navy yards.

Secretary Daniels, who believed that many young officers could trace their downfall to over indulgence in punch at these social functions.

At midnight tonight the naval regulations which have heretofore allowed wardroom officers to form a wine mess or club for the purchase and use of wine and spirits will be substituted.

"The use or introduction for drinking purposes of alcoholic liquors on board any naval vessel, or within any yard or station, is prohibited, and commanding officers will be directly responsible for the enforcement of this order."

Since announcing this change some time ago Secretary Daniels has expressed his personal opinions of his action, but the adverse comment from many officers who held it to be an infringement of their personal liberties, did not go far toward leading to a reversal from his firm stand in the matter.

The only possibility of modification is said to be special dispensation which may be granted during the exchange of international courtesies, on such an occasion as the gathering of ships of all nations at the opening of the Panama Canal.

The only nation thus far to follow the example set by the United States is Norway, whose parliament on June 10 passed a resolution making both the army and the navy messes "dry."

This was a pleasing to Secretary Daniels, and he expressed his belief that it would come to the support of his theory that alcohol and military efficiency do not mix. The German emperor has lately been insistent upon the same thing, and in Russia whose naval losses in the Japanese war have been charged largely to liquor, the temperance movement has also gained ground.

UNABLE TO FIND TRACE OF MISS LENA DEZOLT

Sheriff C. S. Whipple was unable to find any trace of Miss Lena Dezolt, who escaped from the McDonald boarding house Wednesday night. It was thought possible the girl may have gone to Stoughton as she had friends there, but as yet her whereabouts are unknown.
She had been employed on the Denning farm near Janesville and was to have been taken to a state insane institution at Chippewa Falls by Sheriff Whipple. Her brother is making a search for her as well as the police and county officials. The description given is that Miss Dezolt is of a stout build, medium height, twenty-one years of age.

SMALL GIRL'S TEARS WIN BACK HER PET

"Doggie" Which Had Been Snared by City Poundmaster Is Rescued in Nick of Time.

"I want my doggie." This exclamation, enforced with plenty of sorrowful sobs, interrupted proceedings at the city hall this morning, when a little tot of six or seven years, with briny tears rolling down her face, appeared in the office of the city clerk.

Seated on the desk the little girl, between sobs, pouts and angry exclamations declared that the "naughty" doggie had captured her "doggie" Rex, and proceeded to tell the story of how she had been taken to the custody of Ben Hammond, city poundmaster, and had been imprisoned in the "dog pen" Tuesday.

The further the broken story of the lost Rex progressed the faster the tears came, until the storey hearts of gruff officers were moved to unwanted compassion.

One of the city officials remarked one of the city officials, "we will have to see what we can do to get Rex out of the pound for the little lady."

At this point of the scene the father appeared and everybody was happy when the penalty of one dollar was paid, two dollars for a license, and fifty cents for Rex' food during his confinement in the pound.

Instead of tears and pretty pouts, still prettier smiles came over the girl's face. A storm had been changed into sunshine.

While Rex escaped there were five others in the pound less fortunate. Ben Hammond, with his conspicuous star, has been invading the haunts of dogs for the last week and owners of prized hounds that have missed their canines, have made haste to the city hall to redeem them.

Up to date 720 licenses have been issued by City Clerk Hammond and the number has grown considerably since the poundmaster was appointed by Chief Champion.

Under the provisions of the ordinance all owners of dogs within the city limits are required to take out a tag. This includes owners who keep their dogs "at home," and if no tag is taken out, a fine of from five to fifty dollars is the penalty allowed under the ordinance.

ASKS REDUCTION OF FINE AFTER PLEADING GUILTY

"Aw Judge, make it an even five dollars," pleaded Andrew Yousoff, after Judge H. L. Maxfield had fined Yousoff five dollars or ten days, when the prisoner pleaded guilty to the charge of drunkenness.

Evidently Yousoff had a strain or at least the traits of a certain nationally famous in Biblical times, for with the air of a pawbroker he attempted to cut down on the price of the fine.

The costs amounted to a dollar and Yousoff was making an earnest appeal to cut off the profits of the county. In more appropriate words the court told Yousoff there was "nothing doing" and Judge Maxfield started making out his commitment papers to send Yousoff to the county jail.

As soon as the judge's pen dipped into the inkwell the man dug down into his pocket and paid the costs. It was Yousoff's first experience and he found the municipal court was no bargain counter.

REUNION IS ENJOYED AFTER FIFTY YEARS

Schoolmates of Half a Century Ago Hold Outing at Decatur, Green County.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Brookhead, July 2.—A number of ladies and gentlemen who were schoolmates fifty odd years ago in an old school house in old Decatur when that village was in its prime, met at a reunion on Wednesday, July 1st, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Stewart, where a sumptuous dinner was served and the day spent in reminiscences, stories, and recounting incidents of the long ago. Some members of the party had not met in fifty-four years. The occasion was a most enjoyable one and will not soon be forgotten by those present.

Miss Edna McKenzie.

The funeral of Miss Edna McKenzie occurred today at the home of her sister, Mrs. Verne Beals.

Well, well, certainly remarked one of the city officials, "we will have to see what we can do to get Rex out of the pound for the little lady."

At this point of the scene the father appeared and everybody was happy when the penalty of one dollar was paid, two dollars for a license, and fifty cents for Rex' food during his confinement in the pound.

Instead of tears and pretty pouts, still prettier smiles came over the girl's face. A storm had been changed into sunshine.

RACES WILL FOLLOW NONESUCH PARADE

Speed Events Arranged for Saturday Afternoon Promise Plenty of Thrills.

The management of the automobile and motorcycle races at the track of the Jamesville Park association, on Saturday afternoon will be called at four o'clock, immediately after the Colonies parade. This will give the crowds ample time to see the big feature of the Jamesville celebration.

In addition to Burman's 100 horsepower, cutting and the Big Jackson racing car entries have been received from Schreiber of Burlington, who will enter a Marmon "Bob Cat" and a six-cylinder Alco roadster. In road practice last night Mulford and Breeme who will man the big cutting car, were able to get about sixty miles per hour on second speed, the road being too rough to run the big racer in high gear.

Two of the drivers were in town today looking over the course and declared it to be in excellent condition. The racing cars will arrive in Jamesville Friday afternoon and the drivers will commence practicing at once.

The motorcycle entries have been coming in steadily, the latest being Swanson, the Rockford star, who was placed second in the 100 mile race in that city. His mount will be one of the Indian-Elgin models, light roadsters, and is being shipped direct from the Indian factory at Springfield, Mass.

The Jamesville Moose band of thirty pieces will furnish music during the intermissions. An additional feature will be a cycle race between Brown of Jamesville and Florey of Beloit, both driving Imp cycle-cars. These little cars are low and easily handled and should make a very exciting race.

The officials for the meet will be as follows: Referee—Fred Sullivan, Rockford. Starter—Harry Nowlan, Jamesville. Timers—Arthur Jones, Jamesville; James W. Menhall, Beloit. Announcer—A. L. Johnson, Rockford.

Sport Snap Shots

Here's a man who'd rather be an umpire than a lawyer. Clarence "Dope" Eldridge, a Michigan football referee of some prominence, has been given a tryout by the American league and seems to have made an impression. He was a graduate of the Michigan law school and fully prepared to make a name as a lawyer. But oddly enough he prefers to be an umpire instead. Eldridge admits that there is a bit of trouble and worry to be had in both professions, but he has picked umpiring as the most agreeable of the two. And "Dope's" training as a lawyer should help him not a little on the ball field. He is an able orator and any time a player gets disputatious he will find it an easy matter to talk the rowdy one into submission. There's just this chance in it. A few many-syllable law terms may give the ball player the idea that he is being outraged and insulted, and a lawyer-ump would find a real battle on his hands.

Jack Dougherty can't be arrested for not trying to get the coin and that's a pipe. For the Brooklyn purist manager only recently tried to pass off Al Thiel as Al McCoy on a club at Hudson, Wis. The Hudson promoters had Mike Gibbons signed for a July 4 bout, and they thought when they secured Dougherty's consent to send Al McCoy against Gibbons that they were getting the conqueror of George Chip. Someone tipped the promoters off to the fact that McCoy and Dougherty have parted company, so the Gibbons-McCoy contest was hurriedly abandoned. When taken to task for his deceit Dougherty denied there had been any intention to defraud the Hudson promoters or the Hudson public. He explained he has taken away the name of Al McCoy from Al Rudolph, Chip's conqueror, and has bestowed it on Al Thiel.

In the fifth inning of a game between Newark and Montreal, at Newark N. J., Delinger of Montreal hit a low liner to left field. Zimmerman, Newark left fielder, gave chase and, running backward, speared the ball. Just as he made the catch he fell over the short left field fence. Fans claimed he held on, but the umpires said that, as they couldn't see the ball, it counted as a homer. Zimmerman was knocked out by the fall, but was revived and resumed playing.

Last week saw the death of the oldest living prize fighter, James Kelly, known for over half a century as "Australasian Kelly," died at Matamoras, N. J., at the hale old age of ninety-two. He was heavyweight champion of Australia, having won the title in a wonderful battle in 1848. He was a marvel of physique and endurance in his prime and at one time engaged in a fight of ten rounds, said by many to be the longest fight on record.

When Marsans joined the St. Louis Reds he told Mordecai Brown that his pal, M. Cueto, the Cuban, was at liberty and worth having. Brown wired Cueto at once and the latter hastened to St. Louis, raced to the ball park, got into a uniform and went in to hit in the pinch in the first round. And he brought in a run. Later in the game he appeared at third.

Mugsy McGraw is real witty at times, but he doesn't always get to laugh last. The other day he told Umpire Emslie that he (Emslie) was losing his sight and the umpire came right back with this: "I can still see right back with this." Pointing in that direction, he bade Mugsy beat it thence.

It seems that every time the rumor regarding Jake Daubert's managing the Brooklyn bunch comes forth the Dodgers win a string of games. Whether or not Charlie Ebbets has any serious intention of making the change he would at least do well to keep the rumor afloat the biggest part of the season.

Should the Cincinnati Reds win the National league pennant new ideas regarding managing will become prevalent. Buck Herzog, the Red leader, is the most voracious manager ever seen on the diamond. He is there with the chatter at all times and he doesn't whisper it, either.

Won't some public spirited promoter start a little action in the middleweight class? And it would be pleasant if they would announce just who is the present champ. The demise of McCoy seems to cover this point with a bit of confusion. After Chip and Murray and some of the rest of them get through, however, there'll be less uncertainty.

THE APOLLO.

The Apollo management has arranged for the last part of this week a special all female program. There is not a man on the bill. Opening with Frankie Seigel, the Girl from Melody Lane, the audience will be treated, charmed with the singing of this charming young lady. Baby June comes next with a little entertainment that is bound to please, for this little lady is quite young, being one of the youngest on the stage doing a single act. Then comes the big feature, The Colonial Maids, in a grand vaudeville minstrel show presenting a first party that has won them praise in every theatre. In addition to this bill, selections of the popular Mutual Movies will be shown.

F. A. M. MOTORCYCLE CLUBS END MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN

NEW YORK, JULY 2.—Many hundreds of new members of the New York state Affiliated Motorcycle Clubs were added to the rolls today when the intensive membership campaign begun last October ended. Much friendly rivalry was shown between organizations, as the Federations of American Motorcyclists offered handsome prizes for individuals and clubs which secured the largest number of new members.

Evansville News

Evansville, July 2.—E. B. Parsons of Watertown, active paving engineer for the city of Evansville, who arrived here yesterday, began work at once. Although an excavation to the depth of more than one foot will not be necessary at any place, and in some places he will have to fill in. DEMAND FOR HELP IN SOUTH IS SUPPLIED

Enough Harvesters Have Been Secured in Kansas, Oklahoma, Missouri and South Dakota, who have been issuing cries for hundreds of harvesters in their fields, now have been supplied, and are in no further need of help.

The middle of last month witnessed dull times in these states, and particularly at the time when men were most needed. The states are now overstocked with help, from all over the country. Laborers are advised not to go to these states without first ascertaining whether work can be obtained or not. The system of issuing circulars has turned out very successful, and a hint to Wisconsin farmers, who find that their help is short, to furnish similar material for distribution through the government, is given. The local postoffice will transmit the request of any farmer for harvest or other farm help.

If you would spend your money judiciously—keep your eyes on the bargains the merchants are offering in these columns.

Best in All. In character, in style, in all things, the supreme excellence is simplicity.—Longfellow.

Take Time. Fraud and deceit are ever in a hurry. Take time for all things.—Franklin.

WOMAN'S PAGE

WHAT SHALL WE READ?

There are some of us who sit at home all summer, writes a letter friend, "and do the same things. It may be at a summer home, but it is doing the same things. Would you be willing to suggest a few worth while books for those who do not want to let the summer slip away and have no new thoughts or ideas harvested?"

Of course I'd be willing, Letter Friend. The only question is, am I capable of deciding what books are worth while? I don't feel that I am. So suppose instead of my making criticism by posing as a judge of good literature, we let talk over a few books old and new.

Perhaps you'd like to know what I'm taking on my vacation with me. Well then, in my trunk I have Tolstol's "Anna Karenina," DeMorgan's "Joseph Vance," Thomas Hardy's "Far From the Madding Crowd," and "The Yellow Plush Papers" for fiction. For biography I have "The Life of Charles Sumner," "The Life of Stevenson," "The Life of a Donkey," and (for re-reading, of course) Lamb's "Elia." It is not a very "high-brow" list, but I must confess I find it hard to be strenuously intellectual in summer.

My correspondent asked for new books of travel. For these I have applied to the Lady-Who-Lives-With-The-Books and she suggests "My First Years as a French Woman," Madame Waddington, "A Foot in Africa," George E. Woodberry, "Through the Gates of the Mediterranean," Mary Waller, "The Meccas of the World," by Warwick.

The Lady-Who-Lives-With-The-Books also suggests for other new books, "From the Porch," a book of reminiscence by Lady Ritchie, (Theaker's daughter); "They Who Knock at Our Gates," by Mary Antin; "Capturing Mary Carstairs," by H. Sydney Harrison; "From an Island Outpost," by Waller, and "The Price of Love," by Arnold Bennett.

An interesting life of man or woman, is another of my correspondent's specifications. First let me suggest, as I always do, when biography is asked for, "The Life of Johnson," and "The Life of Charlotte Brontë." Balfour's "Stevenson" is another fine piece of work. The "Life of Alice Freeman Palmer," by her husband is one of the most interesting of recent biographies. If you want to be convinced that fact can be as romantic as fiction read Lamartine's "Life of Nelson," or one of the biographies of Richard Sheridan.

Essays make pleasant summer reading. Of course you have read Lamb's "Essays of Elia," but that is one of the beloved books we like to keep with us always. Stevenson's essays, especially the collection "Virginibus Puerisque," everyone ought to know. Of living essayists, I am most fond of Agnes Repplier. By the way, if you will read her "Critical Essays" you will find infinitely better suggestions on how to read than I can give you.

Did you ever read straight through one author—one of the standard writers I mean? There is a certain satisfaction in knowing one author well. Perhaps that would make a pleasant and valuable summer stint. One summer I read all of Jane Austen's work and found them far too few. To trust the Reader's Guide who says that I should read more of her, I will not turn up their intellectual noses at these suggestions. Remember they are given in no dictatorial spirit, but merely to please a Letter Friend.

Heart and Home Problems

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am 14 years old. I would love to become an actress. I have a good voice and am quick in taking things up. When I go to a school I am very quick in the things I do. How could I become an actress? Where should I go to and about becoming an actress? Do you suppose I could be an actress? If I wanted to be one when should I start? Do you have to start earlier than I could act in the movies I should like that.

Is it hard to be an actress? (2) How can I be friendly to everybody and win their friendship? MARIE HEINOR.

My dear little girl, you are one in about a million other little girls who all want to be actresses. There is about one chance in a million that you can ever become a self-supporting, self-respecting actress. A pretty face and a singing voice don't make an actress; neither will the wish to be an actress make you one. A good actress must be very strong. She must have a good education, must be able to work day and night, and must be able to take all the discouragements in the world. You see, it isn't all dancing behind the footlights and kissing your hand to the audience while they applaud you.

If you really want to be a good actress, study hard and complete your school education. Learn something about how to take care of yourself in a business way. Get all the chances you get to act in amateur theatricals. Read good books. Read all of Shakespeare's plays and try to understand them. Study human nature. Then, in five or six years, ask your mother to take you to New York City and call on the theatrical managers and ask if they will give you a trial. You'll begin to get your real hard bumps then. (2) You can win other folks' friendships by being a good friend to them. Be lovable, my dear, and people can't help loving you.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Will you kindly tell me how to make pot-herbs with rose leaves and spices. (1) As you gather the rose petals pick them in a stone crock, covering each layer with a thick layer of salt. After adding the last layer of petals, let stand for a week, then turn out all on a large tray and toss to allow the air to get to each petal.

Now mix the following: 1 oz. each of violet, rose and heliotrope powder, 1 oz. powderedorris root, 1/2 teaspoonful each of powdered mace and cloves, 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon, 4 drops oil of roses, 10 drops oil of chris, 20 eucalyptus, 10 drops bergamot, 2 drams alcohol.

Add to the rose petals, mix well and pack in a jar or vase. Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl of seventeen and will appreciate your advice very much. (1) What do you think of a girl who lets every fellow kiss her? (2) What should a girl say when a fellow tells her he is glad he met her?

(3) I have gone with a girl my age for six years. Every time we make an engagement she waits until the last minute and then tells me she is going away with her aunt. Do you think she cares for me? (1) I think she is pretty cheap and very foolish, my dear. (2) She can say "Thank you" with an appreciative smile. (3) Better not make any more engagements with her. Evidently she does not care to go with you.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Please give me a recipe for making deved eggs. (1) One who wants to know. (2) Beat eggs hard, then drop in cold water so the shell may be peeled off easily without breaking the egg. Cut egg in half either way, take out yolk without breaking the white. Mash the yolk, add a little salt, mix and spread in a shallow dish. Put two halves of egg together and fasten with a toothpick.

Every Day Talks To Every Day People (BY FRANCES JOYCE KENNEDY.) Two men walked home from work together at the close of day. Both were in life's morning; both were married. One had two children, the other had but lately come to the prime of fatherhood. The father of two was speaking.

"I tell you this knowing a fellow has someone dependent on him is a mighty steady influence. I have drunk a bit but I was married; played cards a little too. Spent my money often before I earned it; never had a cent when payday came around. Take it now. It's all different, but I do it and honestly I think I do it rather well. We are all out of debt for our household furnishings and have fifty dollars saved towards a home. When we married I had but sixteen dollars in the world that I could call my own. That amount for a man to start marriage on was pretty near the fine edge of poverty—but the girl was willing to share with me. I thought heaven opened when she said 'yes'."

The second man listened in silence. He had more than sixteen dollars saved when he married. But somehow he had gone like a ship on the sun. He was in debt going to bed every day. He was working as a single man. It had been a matter of principle with him. He had never drunk; he had worked steadily. Bitterly he told himself there was something blameworthy in his not being able to run his home as well, or nearly as well, as the man who walked beside him.

What was the trouble? At the corner he nodded to his friend, who hid him a cheery adieu, and hastened down a side street to his home. He knew the home his friend was coming to. A place that to the ordinary observer would seem very commonplace; just a house and a garden. But he also knew that the house his friend entered sheltered a woman who thought no work too great that would in any way aid her husband up the ladder of success—that slippery ladder that looks so easy until you start to climb it. She was ever ready to put her husband's plans first, to eliminate her own from the board entirely if in any way they retarded his progress. She knew that where stands a man there stands his wife and children. She knew that if her husband were a failure, she would be by his side; that were he the president, she would be by his side also. Wisely she planned to help him advance.

His wife—he said his teeth hard. His wife thought he never should stand in an upright position before her—almost so well did she think of herself, so little of him. Was there anything in the world that she would do for him? He was trying hard as did his neighbor. In union there is strength and he was trying hard to start in life. Could he do it? Could he? He entered his home with a fat from his neighbor. The baby had been cross all day. He listened patiently as he washed for supper, wondering if every woman fuses about a baby. Time was not so far back that he had thought a baby was the one best bet in the world. A baby that was his and

Marriage is such a big proposition, leaving out all talk on the sacredness of it, that to make a success of it, one has to keep eternally on his toes. Women just as well as men. If a girl marries to get out of work, to have a home, to get some man to support her, her husband is bound to be a failure. Trouble of the sort that she ahead of her, is going to spell disaster. If every woman in this fine country of ours would start this fine country of ours (at seven work when her husband does) and stay with her job all day, there might be fewer homes disbanding; fewer men trying to strain every nerve to make their salaries stretch over almost impossible distances; fewer men thinking bitterly that marriage was a "fake."

Yes, we know it takes two, but through any kind of unions there is a man who thinks this of the Sacrament of Matrimony?

Pures of Cabbage and Potatoes. One pint boiled finely-minced cabbage, six medium sized potatoes, two tablespoonsful butter or savory drippings, two tablespoonsful salt, one-half teaspoonful pepper, one-half pint hot milk.

Peel the potatoes and put them in a stewpan with boiling water enough to cover them. Cook just 30 minutes. Pour off the water and wash fine and light. Beat in the hot milk, seasoning, and cabbage. Cook about five minutes longer.

The bulletin gives also the rule for preparing the savory drippings mentioned above which can be frequently used in place of butter and, therefore, prove economical. The fat from the fried sausages, ham, bacon, and pork, and from roast pork, veal, and chicken can all be used, according to Miss Parloa. Later work in the office of experiment stations has shown that even the harder fats, such as those from beef and mutton, can be used with vegetables particularly if they are combined with some of the softer fats, such as pork fat. Mutton fat heated (in a double boiler for convenience) with a little skim milk has been found to lose most of its characteristic taste to which some people object.

Many of the fats mentioned, such as the fat from sausages, ham, and bacon are in themselves savory; others can be made so. Miss Parloa suggests that for every half pint of fat to be tried out, a small uncut onion, a few leaves of summer savory or thyme, or both, a teaspoonful of salt, and a speck of pepper be used. If cooked in the fat, these impart a pleasant taste and make it useful for many purposes. Or a small apple and a small onion may be cooked in the fat. In this case, the fat should be baked in a moderately hot oven until the apple and onion are brown. In either case, strain the fat and keep it in a cool, dry place, well covered.

MADE HIS "CHARMS" PUBLIC

Roman Farmer Confounded His Foes by Explanation of Cause of His Prosperity.

Curios Cresnau, a freedman who had much larger crops upon a small field than his neighbors had upon their extensive farms, was greatly envied, and accused of withdrawing the produce of the people's fields by witchcraft.

Being brought to trial, and fearing that he would be condemned, immediately before the question was put he produced in the forum all his laboring utensils, and brought along with him a stout daughter, well fed and clothed, his iron tools of the most excellent construction, large spades, heavy shares and oxen in the best order.

Then he said, "These, Romans, are my charms; nor can I show you, or bring into the forum, my night meditations, my watchings and my toils." He was unanimously acquitted.—Pliny.

Old Civil Service Examination.

Lady Dorothy Nevill, in one of her books, gave an amusing example of the style of examination for posts in the civil service which prevailed before the advent of the competitive system. The young candidate was ushered into the room of the old chief clerk of the department, and this ordeal followed:

"Sit down, sir," roared a voice of thunder. Then, after a painful pause: "Now, sir, attention. I shall examine you in arithmetic."

"Shall I not have pen and paper?" "No, sir," thundered out the tyrant voice. "Attention! How much are two and two?"

Paralyzed by the voice and sudden question, the youth stared and then gasped out quite seriously: "Four, sir."

"Quite right, sir," roared out the examiner, slapping him on the back. "You'll do, sir."

But the question surely should have been: "How many blue beans make five?"

Save Gummed Flaps of Envelopes. Save the gummed flaps of unsealed envelopes which come to you by mail, to label your canned fruit with. You will find it very convenient to use at a glance just what each jar contains, and the gummed labels thus saved are easily put on and very economical.

Never Alone. They are never alone who are accompanied by noble thoughts.—Sir Philip Sidney.

Peggy & Company

Peggy's Return From the Rustic P. O. X. Is Scarcely as Blithe and Gay as Her Journey There.

The little village of Thomonsville, the scene of Peggy's rural retirement, has a post office as quaint in every respect as one could very well wish. The sign above is becoming ill-lettered, indeed one of the letters is backward. A bench and several pained chairs along the stoop in front invite the repose of rustic idlers who chew straws and drawl in the most approved fashion.

It will be seen that nothing is lacking to complete the picturesque quality of Thomonsville's post office. Nothing perhaps and yet—ah, a pretty girl from the city, a fair visitor among these untrod ways would lend a flip to the scene and excite the exultatory admiration of those about. And here comes Peggy in the coolest and most flutty of summer frocks, a parasol swinging from her arm. There are several reasons why Peggy should skip gaily down to the post office today. The reasons later prove to be four letters and a post card.

There is also another letter. But it isn't one of the reasons why Peggy's gait down the village street was blithe and gay. The four letters and the card contain expressions of unabated affection and esteem, reverence and devotion, with many amorous sighs between the lines. All of them—though perhaps you've already guessed it were from young men.

Peggy reads their letters through, each incident dimple a-twinkle, and a little laugh of mockery in her heart. Oh, thou coy and cruel beauty! I relent, fair sorceress, cease to thus distract thy devotees with these heartless, cozen ways.

With a far-away smile of quiet exultation, Peggy turned to the fifth letter, a message from home. Had she had any preconception of its contents, her light-hearted skipping down the village street would have been visibly slackened. The letter would have taken a bit of the skip out of her mood and as she now reads the far away smile abovementioned gives way to deep shades of disappointment and annoyance.

Mother is very sick, Peggy must come home at once. Peggy will have to look after the meals. Peggy will have to care for mother. Mother may have to go away. Peggy must be there to run the house.

Oh, was there ever so cruelly mis-treated a girl as Peggy, who thought of her mother's illness, her plans, her little old HER happiness enter into it. And the rest of the walk home Peggy spent in these anguished reflections.

Cheerup, Peggy, little dear, the work at home may really do you good!

NINE YEARS WILL SEE STREAMS FULL OF TROUT

Plans to completely re-stock all trout streams and lakes throughout the national forests of Colorado, Wyoming, and South Dakota, within a period of nine years, are well under way, as the result of the approval by the federal bureau of fisheries of a plan of operation prepared by the forest service. The bureau of fisheries has promised to furnish the necessary fish fry to be directed to railroad stations nearest the waters to be stocked so that as many streams as possible may be supplied from a central point. The planting of all fry will be performed by forest officers who will keep close check on the results of the work.

According to the estimates of the forest officers, approximately twenty million trout fry of the brook, rainbow, and black-spotted varieties will be needed to meet the requirements of all the waters adaptable to the production of trout. Of this great number the bureau of fisheries is prepared to supply something over four and a half million this year and a gradually decreasing number each successive year for a total of nine, at the end of which time it is expected that the complete re-stocking will have been accomplished. The estimates are said to cover 273 streams and lakes in the three states.

The re-stocking of national forest streams in all states where such forests are situated, including those now being acquired in the White mountains and the southern Appalachians, will be given attention as rapidly as supplies of fish fry become available for planting purposes. The forest service is admirably organized to carry on work of this kind and does so with practically no interference with regular activities since the fry must be handled with the utmost haste and frequently during the late evening or early morning hours. The production of the existing federal and state fish hatcheries is hardly adequate to meet all demands, however, and therefore the work has to be done in installments.

The Lapse of Enoch Wentworth

"Don't," entreated the actress. "You hurt terribly. You do not know how strong you are. Besides—you are foolish, horribly foolish. If you should tear this, it is nothing but Exhibit A. There are hundreds of sheets where it came from. And let me tell you—they are where you won't find them."

Wentworth, unclasped her wrists, but his eyes were blazing with murderous fury. He turned with a quick gesture to the wall behind him. Against a rug of Oriental matting hung a collection of savage weapons. The woman watched him with cool unconcern. He seemed to be searching rapidly with his eyes for something. He laid his hand upon a long thin dagger. Here and there its blade had rusted to blackness, but its edge was deadly keen. He jabbed the point of it into his blotting pad. It curled over lithely, as a Ferrara does. Then he glanced at the woman beside the table. His eyes were glittering with the bloodthirsty passions of the primitive man.

Zilla Paget lifted a lorgnette which hung at her wrist by a jeweled chain. She clicked it open, raised it to her eyes—and laughed.

"I wonder," she murmured, "if you realize how ridiculous you look. You are too white-livered to do such a thing as that. Besides," she glanced about the sunlit room, "where could you hide the body?"

Enoch tossed the blade upon his desk and began to walk up and down the floor. He rolled his handkerchief into a hard ball and dabbed with it continually at his moist forehead. The woman sat perfectly still. She turned to fold the sheets of paper, then she laid one hand upon them and lay back gracefully in her chair.

Wentworth turned on her with a sudden question. "How much do you want for—Exhibit A and the rest of the evidence?"

She shrugged her shoulders. "I have no intention of selling it."

"Then what's your price?" Enoch's question snapped like a pistol shot.

She looked up at him with a devious smile.

"My price is ridiculously small, much less than it is worth. I am merely coming here—to live."

"You are coming here—to live? Here—in the house—with my sister?"

"Here—in the house—with your sister," she repeated mockingly. "Exactly. I have taken a fancy to this part of the city. It is rather attractive for New York. I think I shall enjoy the society of your—sister. You will not find me a troublesome guest. I can fit in happily to your home circle. Part of my luggage is there in the hall, you know. The rest is downstairs."

A wave of scarlet swept over Enoch's face.

"To think of Merry squaring up through—you. It's the most infernal scheme ever concocted."

"That's a bally bad guess of yours. Merry does not come into this at all."

"Where did you get these?" Enoch spoke fiercely and pointed to the sheets of paper that lay under her hand.

"It's rather an unusual story. Sit down and I'll tell it to you. If you are searching for a plot for that new play of yours, you might find this worth while."

"I had showed poor taste," Wentworth sat staring at her with sullen curiosity.

"I have found out that he is in New York and that ten years ago he had been married here. Also that his wife strangle hold on her?"

Miss Paget laughed triumphantly. "The strangle hold! You Americans have such jolly strong words! That's great—the strangle hold."

She rose and folded the pages of manuscript, put them in her bag, then she drew off her coat and hung it on the chair behind her. She lifted a gold case from the pocket, picked out a cigarette, and scratching a match lit it, blowing a delicate ring of smoke across the room. It fitted into Wentworth's face.

"I always knew," she bent over to drop a flock of ashes on a tray beside her, "or rather I have guessed for a long time, that you did not write 'The House of Esterbrook.'"

"What gave you that impression?"

"For one thing, everybody tells how you and Merry were friends once—Castor and Pollux sort of guys, don't you know. You hate each other now. An owl could see that with its eyes shut."

"If you ever left the stage you could make big money in the detective business," Enoch laughed harshly.

"Perhaps," she acceded. "Then I have rehearsed too many plays not to know the author when I bump into him. I knew months ago that Merry wrote 'The House,' but I could not prove it. You haven't got it in you to do that sort of work."

"Thank you," Enoch laughed unsteadily.

"Here's the whole situation. If Miss Wentworth and you do not fancy having me here as a guest, no better word than that occurs to me now. Grant Oswald might be interested; at least he might insist on paying the royalties to the author. Or I could get a fancy price for the story from a New York paper. I am told they pay tremendously on this side for a ripping sensation. This would make one, don't you say so yourself?"

"My God!" Enoch stared at her with desperate eyes.

Miss Paget rose, unpinned her hat and tossed it upon the table. She stood surveying Wentworth with a gleam of amusement in her eyes. Then she crossed the room and leaned out at the window. "Hi, there, Cabby," she called, "wake up. Bring in the rest of that luggage."

"Don't be in such a blooming hurry. I tell you the situation is dramatic. I went to the house where Alice Volk lives in Harlem—oh, I was disguised. I tell you, you would never have known me. The detective got in first and opened the area door. I slipped in and waited. He was to give me a signal when Volk arrived. A servant came clumping down the cellar stairs after coal. I hid in a closet where they store trash and waste paper."

Enoch's eyes narrowed and a yellow pallor crept over his face. "Curse it!" He spoke in a hoarse whisper.

"Yes, curse it!" repeated Zilla Paget with an amused laugh. "My word! It was a blooming queer accident! I closed the door, the latch caught and I couldn't get out. There I was, locked in that beastly hole. I struck a match. It was lucky I had a match-box along. Then I found an electric light. The first thing my eyes lit on among that waste was a sheet of paper. I picked it up. I had seen this writing before."

"Whose was it?" stammered Wentworth.

"Whose was it? Don't put that bluff on me," cried the actress scornfully. "It was Merry's, of course. You recognized it in a second. It was the last speech I made in the second act—as it used to be—before you, the author, changed it."

"Well," cried Enoch fiercely. The woman paused and turned to him with an amused smile.

"I had forgotten about George Volk. He never showed up. He does not count anyway. I found the whole play in that closet."

"Then what did you do?" Enoch's face was full of hatred and defiance. His eyes flamed with the tumult of an animal at bay.

"There was only one thing to do," Zilla Paget lay back in the chair and smoothed the chinchilla of her muff caressingly. "Of course I brought it away with me, every scrap of it. You would not have let such a valuable asset into the hands of a dustman, would you? There are only two pages missing. Do you care to see it?"

"Damn you, no! I have no wish to see it," snarled Wentworth.

"Any fool can tell at a glance it is a first draft. Merry must have written like mad. There is hardly a change in it. Except for my own role, every line stands almost as it was written."

Enoch suddenly leaned forward in his chair. "You think you've got the strangle hold on her?"

Miss Paget laughed triumphantly. "The strangle hold! You Americans have such jolly strong words! That's great—the strangle hold."

She rose and folded the pages of manuscript, put them in her bag, then she drew off her coat and hung it on the chair behind her. She lifted a gold case from the pocket, picked out a cigarette, and scratching a match lit it, blowing a delicate ring of smoke across the room. It fitted into Wentworth's face.

"What do you mean by a strange coincidence, Marie?" asked dad. "Harold," answered Marie, "asked me the same question about your income."

"You have done it, Uncle Jason," Dorcas took the sooty hand between her palms. "If mother could know how faithfully you have filled your promise—and somehow I feel, Uncle Jason, that she does know—she would say that you have the whitest soul God ever put into a black body."

"Oh Lawdy, Missy, can't I come wid yo'?" I don't need no money. Yo' needn't pay fo' me anywhar."

"Jason, you blessed old saint, it isn't money I am considering. I have plenty of money. Mother left Enoch in your care as much as she did me. You have told me that."

The negro bowed his head solemnly. "Won't you stay with him?" Jason pointed to the inner door of the vestibule. "Honey, what's a-goin' to happen? Do yo' reckon dat Marse Enoch's a-goin' to marry dat p-son?"

"Jason, I don't know. Only you must stay here."

"I will." The old servant spoke with slow impressiveness. "Fore de Lawd, I will, Missy."

She ran down the steps. Jason followed to close the carriage door when she entered. As they moved away, Dorcas leaned out to glance at the home which had been hers since school days ended. She caught a glimpse of Enoch through the dusk. He was leaning from the library window. The room behind him gleamed white with a blaze of electricity. Before the mantel mirror stood a woman. Her arms reached above her head to pin back waves of shining yellow hair.

The cabman pulled up his horses and looked through a window in the roof. "You didn't tell me, lady, where you want to go."

"Drive me to the Gotham Theater," said Dorcas; "then I wish you to take this little boy to Harlem."

Dinner Stories

A minister, spending a holiday in the north of Ireland, was out walking and, feeling thirsty, called at a farmhouse for a drink of milk. The farmer's wife gave him a large bowl of milk, and while he was quenching his thirst a number of pigs got around about him. The minister noticed that the pigs were very strange in their manner, so he said:

"My good lady, why are the pigs so excited?"

The farmer's wife replied, "Sure, it's no wonder they are excited, sir; it's their own bowl you are drinking out of!"

Papa was sitting in the library one evening some time since when his beautiful daughter happily rushed into the room, dropped upon his knee and put her arms around his neck.

"Papa, dear," she blushed and cooed, "Harold was just here to see me. He Plover, Iowa.—"From a small child my 13 year old daughter had female weakness. I spoke to three doctors about it and they did not help her any. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had been of great benefit to me, so I decided to have her give it a trial. She has taken five bottles of the Vegetable Compound according to directions on the bottle and she is cured of this trouble. She was all run down when she started taking the Compound and her periods did not come right. She was so poorly and weak that I often had to help her dress herself, but now she is regular and is growing strong and healthy."—Mrs. MARTIN HELVIG, Plover, Iowa.

Hundreds of such letters expressing gratitude for the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished are constantly being received, proving the reliability of this grand old remedy.

If you are ill do not drag along and continue to suffer day in and day out but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a woman's remedy for woman's ills.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

First Aid When In Need of Help

"Through the columns of our home town paper we were able to secure the services of a Governess, that mere money, it seems, could never replace," said a serious faced Mother of six children to a caller the past week.

"I have had such trouble," returned the caller. "I do not seem able to get in touch with the right class of help."

"Did you ever advertise?"

"Y—e—s!"

"You resent that way of getting help?"

"Yes!"

"If you could know what genuine aid the want ad page of your home town paper could be to you, all such resentment would vanish—as mist before the sun. I could hardly keep house without that page of our paper. This is no idle boast! I speak from years of experience. Give it a fair trial. You will be surprised to know how many of the best kind of people can be reached through this page of your paper; how many use it as a help to gaining a livelihood."

Did this page ever aid you? Did you ever try it?

A learned Bishop was once taken to task by some of his denominational brethren on the charges of exhibiting conceit of himself at variance with the spirit of humility. "It is not conceit," replied the bishop, with that preponderant bearing that silenced opposition. "It is not conceit, brethren. It is the consciousness of superiority." —Lippincott's.
